

Works-in-Progress Seminar

G9890

Fall 2009

716 Philosophy Hall

W 2:10pm-4:00pm

Professor

John Morrison

jmorriso@barnard.edu

326A Milbank

Office hour: W 12:30-1:30

Description

This graduate-level course has two aims. The first is to help people feel more comfortable asking questions at colloquia and conferences. The second is to help people transform good objections into good questions. Towards these ends, we will meet on the Wednesday before each colloquium and conference to discuss possible questions.

Requirements

You can earn R credit for the course merely by attending a significant number of seminars and the corresponding colloquia and conferences. In order to earn a letter grade you will need to write a term paper that touches on a theme discussed by one of the speakers. You will also need to attend all the seminars and participate in all the colloquia and conferences.

Meetings

Seminar	Colloquium or conference	Date
9/23	Department Colloquium: Cora Diamond	9/24
9/30	Women, Philosophy, and History	10/2-10/3
10/14	The Dewey Workshop	10/16
———	Heyman Center: Quentin Skinner	10/22
11/11	Department Colloquium: Tim Maudlin	11/12
———	Heyman Center: Social Choice and Individual Values	12/11
———	Practice Job Talks (tentative)	12/1, 12/3, 12/8, 12/10